

Applications open until April 10th!

Master in Education Policies for Global Development

Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona
University of Glasgow
University of Cyprus

GLOBED promotes an interdisciplinary and critical approach to education policy analysis for students interested in the field of international cooperation and development.

This is a 120 ECTS, two-years programme, offered in English.

Why this programme

- This interdisciplinary programme draws on theories and methods from comparative education research, education policy analysis and international development studies.
- Mobility periods are designed to maximise a coherent learning experience in different institutional settings and cultures.
- The teaching team combines expertise and research experience in several parts of the world, including South and Central America, South-East Asia, Sub-Saharan Africa, the Arab World, and Western and Eastern Europe.
- Internships with our +50 associate partners, including UNESCO, will offer you the opportunity to acquire professional experience and to develop and apply your practical skills in a real work environment.
- You will have the opportunity to enhance your methodological and analytical skills by developing your own research project and by carrying out fieldwork in a developing context.
- This degree is awarded by a consortium comprised of Autonomous University of Barcelona, University of Glasgow, and University of Cyprus.

Programme structure

Courses in semester 1 are offered by the Autonomous University of Barcelona (UAB). In semester 2 you will study at the University of Glasgow (UofG) or University of Cyprus (UCY), based on your chosen pathway. In semester 3 you will undertake an internship with one of our associate partners and carry out fieldwork in a developing context.

A mandatory winter school hosted by the University of Cyprus will take place in February between semesters 3 and 4. In semester 4 you will work on your dissertation under staff supervision from one of the partners, dependent on your choice of topic.

Year 1 – semester 1 (September – December)

UAB – Knowledge base

- Actors in education and development
- Basic research methods
- Educational development, poverty and global inequalities
- Global education policies
- Theories of social justice in education

Year 1 – semester 2 (January – June)

Pathway A: UofG – Education, skills and international development

- Advanced research methods
- Education and international development
- International and comparative education

Pathway B: UCY – Comparative and inclusive education

- Advanced research methods
- Comparative education
- Special and inclusive education

Year 2 – semester 3 (September – February)

- Fieldwork
- Internship
- Winter School

Year 2 - semester 4: (March – September)

- Dissertation (Barcelona/Glasgow/Cyprus)

Career prospects

Graduates will be equipped for careers as analysts, consultants, administrators, policy makers and leaders in the design and implementation of education plans, whether in local, regional or national governments, international organisations, NGOs or large-scale education providers operating in developed or developing countries.

Master tuition fees

The two-years programme is 11.500 € for EU/UK/EEA students and 16.000 € for students from the rest of the world. Fees include a medical insurance for 24 months and are paid in three different installments.

Consortium partners

Universitat Autònoma
de Barcelona

Contact

info@globed.eu
Apply here!

